

Endangered Animals

There are a lot of endangered animals like: The Puerto Rican parrot, The Puerto Rican Boa, The Coquí, etc. But why are they considered endangered? Because of the human society and the global warming. Not only does the global warming affect us, it affects even the sea animals. But what causes the global warming? US. We should start being more sympathetic with the situation if we want to have all of our animals doing their job. Even if we don't think so each animal has a reason to be. For example the coquí, it gives us happiness, that peaceful sound at night, different than any other place in the world, making us unique. But what are the most important in Puerto Rico that we are losing day by day. Maybe with this you can notice that this is happening right in front of our eyes.

Like mentioned before, the endangered animals are: 3 types of coquíes, 'el perro mudo', and the national bat. But what is the government doing to fix this? The government of Puerto Rico established a new law saying that you may not abandon any dog, even though the dog is not an endangered animal they are preventing them to be one. For those who are endangered they are doing nothing at all. It is sad to see how they care the minimum about this even if this is a serious situation that will be affecting us sooner or later. Like the bees, they are starting to be endangered in United States; they are what keep us alive. We need to be more careful with what we do and use. I hope these words make you think about the situation and start changing your way of doing some things.

1. <https://www.elnuevodia.com/noticias/locales/nota/pactoporunpuertoricomasseguroparalosanimales-2081518/>
2. <https://www.elnuevodia.com/noticias/locales/nota/pactoporunpuertoricomasseguroparalosanimales-2081518/>
3. <http://www2.pr.gov/ogp/BVirtual/LeyesOrganicas/pages/36-1984.aspx>

Nadia Liz Lopez
INGL-310204